Reminiscent of a campana (bell-shaped) urn, this demi lune console table features a Neoclassical style, molded base. Consisting of a fluted body, the half urn has been painted to mimic antiquity, including hues of gray, green, and cream. A pair of curled acanthus leaf handles are affixed to the middle of the bulbous body, just on the outside of a foliate drapery tied with a ribbon. Egg and dart motif embellish the thinly molded socle. The top of the urn is adorned with a layer of gadrooning that sits just under the travertine veneered demi lune top. As with most travertine, the veneer consists of neutral colors, in this case beige and cream. Our half urn demi lune console table can be used in numerous rooms of the house, from an entry to a hallway. The neoclassic style can be paired with almost any style décor.

CONDITION: Good condition with minor rubs. Wear commensurate to use. Please see photos for details.
